"I, too, have a dream. I dream of a hundred of our philosophy [humanities, social science, natural science, fine arts, and biblical studies] majors, rigorously educated, going on to the best graduate schools and then strategically located in colleges and universities across the land. I dream of the impact they could make on people and on the history of ideas. I dream of those who go into other professions, who will bring Christian perspectives to bear throughout their disciplines, and in law and business and medicine and throughout our society."

Keynote Speaker:
Dr. Nigel Cameron

Dr. Nigel M. de S. Cameron, Dean of The Wilberforce Forum, is former Provost and Distinguished Professor of Theology and Culture at Trinity International University/Trinity Evangelical Divinity School in Deerfield, Illinois. Known internationally for his work on bioethics, Dr. Cameron founded the journal Ethics and Medicine and the Centre for Bioethics and Public Policy (bioethics.ac.uk) in London, England; he also chairs the board of the Center for Bioethics in the Church (thebc.org).

Dr. Cameron has appeared on CNN, ABC, Nightline, Frontline, and other network media as a spokesman for Judeo-Christian perspectives on old and new issues in medicine and bioethics. He testified before the congressional hearings on human cloning. He has written and edited nine books in bioethics, including his seminal volume The New Medicine (Crossway, 1992).

Dr. Cameron's work spans theology as well as ethics. He edited the major reference The Dictionary of Scottish Church History and Theology (InterVarsity) as well as other volumes on systematic theology, and has written on issues as diverse as the authority of the Bible, evolution, and the Christian life. Originally from the United Kingdom, Nigel Cameron is a naturalized US citizen. He and his wife Shenach, parents of five children, live in Deerfield, Illinois.
